

Deregulation places too much control over information in the hands of too few entities, who are unconcerned with the public interest.